

Stinking Thinking and Mistaken Beliefs

All of us develop “mythconceptions” to some degree that color our thinking. We develop mistaken beliefs in three different areas: beliefs about ourselves, our feelings, and the world around us. Mistaken beliefs about ourselves can be beliefs such as: I am not good enough; I’m not lovable; I’m not worthy. Mistaken beliefs about our emotions are beliefs such as: My feelings are bad; having feelings are weak; my feelings are wrong and must be suppressed or hidden; I’m too sensitive. And our mistaken beliefs about the world are beliefs such as: The world is not safe; the world is scary; people are out to get me; there isn’t any support for me.

Our myth conceptions are just that—mistaken concepts which cause faulty thinking. Our mistaken beliefs and assumptions spawn stinking thinking. Stinking Thoughts are mistaken thoughts that appear as factual, but are not true. Stinking Thinking takes many forms: rationalizing, making excuses, being defensive, over-generalizing, thinking you are unloved or unworthy, labeling, blaming, minimizing, projecting, being prejudiced, mind reading, being superstitious, obfuscating, all-or-nothing thinking—all ways of fudging or denying the truth and escaping from the deeper reality underneath.

When you learn to recognize your Stinking Thinking for what it really is—thoughts masquerading as truth—you can see that it stems from mistaken beliefs. This false thinking keeps you from achieving what you could and discourages you from trying new things, taking risks, and creating MORE. You may use these thoughts to talk you out of pursuing MORE before you even get a fighting chance. Stinking thinking lowers motivation and kills hope. Yet, it’s how most of us think and talk most of the time.

Complete the Stinking Thinking Template. Pick a demeaning, judgmental, rationalizing thought you have about yourself, your feelings, or your world, and fill out the template to see what the belief could be underneath. Every time you blame another, shame yourself, or justify yourself, you are indulging in stinking thinking related to your mistaken beliefs.

8. What are alternative ways you could meet your deeper yearning?

9. What supportive, creative, generative, positive thoughts could you have thought in that situation?

Examples of Positive Thoughts:

That's challenging, but I'm willing to engage in the challenge.

I've never done that before, but I'm willing to give it a try.

I am afraid, but I'm willing to go for it anyway.

This is tough, but it's not insurmountable.

I need to apply myself now because putting it off is just an excuse.

I haven't made the time but I can choose to.

I don't have an immediate solution for how to afford it, but if I intend it I can make it happen.

This happens from time to time, but I can get this done on time.

I wonder what he meant by that. I'll ask him.

My contributions count in the big picture.

I feel upset, but that doesn't make me a bad person.

I didn't do that sooner, but I can learn from that mistake.

STINKING THINKING CATEGORIES
